

Fed Sets 8-Month Tapering Schedule, Starting in November

By: Eric Stein, CFA | September 23, 2021

Boston - The U.S. Federal Reserve had what I would describe as a moderately hawkish meeting on Wednesday, as it accelerated its timetable for tapering, and set the stage for eventual rate increases.

Fed Chair Jerome Powell indicated that tapering would begin in November, scaling back current purchases of $120 billion per month by $15 billion — $10 billion fewer U.S. Treasury purchases and $5 billion fewer of mortgage-backed securities (MBS). That implies an eight-month period of tapering, concluding in mid-2022.

At his press conference, Powell made a big distinction between the schedule for tapering, which seems ready to start in November barring a dramatic change in the economy, and the lift for rates. The Fed's "dot plot" chart now shows that nine of the 18 Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) members anticipate rates beginning to increase in mid-2022, from the current target of 0% to 0.25% to slightly over 2% in 2024.

That implies rates will still be very low for a long time — even though the Fed bumped up its projections for 2021 inflation to 4.2% from 3.4% in June, as measured by personal consumption expenditures (PCE). The Fed still feels the inflation bump is "transitory," as it predicted rates of 2.2% for 2022 and 2023.

The yield curve flattened very slightly on Wednesday — perhaps a signal that the market believes, at the margin, the tightening will push down inflation, justifying the curve flattening. But the slight nature of the flattening may also indicate that the market is questioning how much the Fed can continue to raise rates.

One interesting note is the emerging picture of how the Fed is evolving its average inflation targeting (AIT) policy. At last June's meeting, which was even more hawkish than the September meeting, policymakers seemed to have a low tolerance for inflationary overshoot of the 2% target; at the Wednesday meeting, the tolerance for overshoot seems to be higher.

Bottom line: We now have a more definitive plan on tapering from the Fed. For other clues on the timing of rate hikes, the market will be watching for further signals from Fed governors, the strength of the recovery (and the Delta variant's impact), and the course of inflation.

Eric Stein, CFA
Chief Investment Officer
Fixed Income
Eaton Vance Management

"Powell indicated that tapering would begin in November, scaling back current purchases of $120 billion per month by $15 billion over an eight-month period concluding in mid-2022."

The views expressed in these posts are those of the authors and are current only through the date stated. These views are subject to change at any time based upon market or other conditions, and Eaton Vance disclaims any responsibility to update such views. These views may not be relied upon as investment advice and, because investment decisions for Eaton Vance are based on many factors, may not be relied upon as an indication of trading intent on behalf of any Eaton Vance strategy. The discussion herein is general in nature and is provided for informational purposes only. There is no guarantee as to its accuracy or completeness.

To report a website vulnerability, please go to Responsible Disclosure.

Eaton Vance is part of Morgan Stanley Investment Management, the asset management division of Morgan Stanley.

The information on this Web site is for U.S. residents only. The information on this Web site does not constitute an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to purchase, securities in any jurisdiction to any person to whom it is not lawful to make such an offer.

There are no guarantees regarding the achievement of investment objectives, target returns, portfolio construction, allocations or measurements such as alpha, tracking error, stock weightings and other information ratios. The views and strategies described may not be suitable for all investors. Not all of Eaton Vance's recommendations have been or will be profitable. Eaton Vance does not provide tax or legal advice. Investing entails risks and there can be no assurance that Eaton Vance (and its affiliates) will achieve profits or avoid incurring losses. Prospective investors should consult with a tax or legal advisor before making any investment decision.

NOT FDIC INSURED | OFFER NO BANK GUARANTEE | MAY LOSE VALUE | NOT INSURED BY ANY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AGENCY | NOT A DEPOSIT

© Eaton Vance Management. All rights reserved. Two International Place, Boston, MA 02110.