

Timely insights
on the issues that matter most to investors.

The views expressed in these posts are those of the authors and are current only through the date stated. These views are subject to change at any time based upon market or other conditions, and Eaton Vance disclaims any responsibility to update such views. These views may not be relied upon as investment advice and, because investment decisions for Eaton Vance are based on many factors, may not be relied upon as an indication of trading intent on behalf of any Eaton Vance fund. The discussion herein is general in nature and is provided for informational purposes only. There is no guarantee as to its accuracy or completeness. Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

MARCH 17, 2020

Fed | Income | Markets | Volatility

Agency MBS market stands to benefit from Fed's return

Boston - Investors looking for a high quality parking place to sit out these volatile markets may want to revisit one of the best performing sectors during the financial crisis of 2008, the agency mortgage backed security (MBS) market.

Thanks to the US government backing, agency MBS is a AAA-rated market that offers investors a highly liquid place to invest while taking on less credit risk. And it would be a mistake to confuse government guaranteed agency MBS with their non-government guaranteed counterpart from the pre-crisis era.... sub-prime MBS.

The US Federal Reserve (Fed) on Sunday announced a new round of quantitative easing, committing to purchase "at least" $500 billion in Treasuries and $200 billion in agency MBS, all on top of a 100-basis-point cut in the federal funds rate. For the agency MBS market, the announcement was welcome news, as spreads over Treasuries sit at their widest levels since 2013.

Andrew Szczurowski, CFA

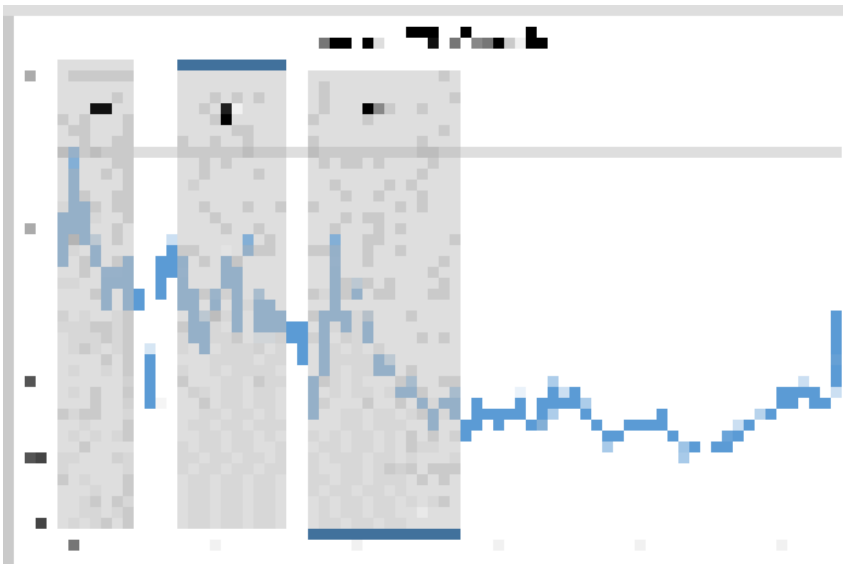

Portfolio Manager
Global Income Group
Eaton Vance
Management

Alexander Payne, CFA

Portfolio Manager
Global Income Group
Eaton Vance
Management

"The largest single holder of agency MBS has re-emerged, thus helping to ensure a liquid and orderly mortgage market."

Source: WM/Reuters Closing Mid Spot Rates and Forward Rates as of March 16, 2020.

The Fed's announcement was also a sharp turnaround from the current policy, which was allowing roughly $20 billion of agency MBS to roll off their balance sheet each month. The Fed has essentially gone from releasing $240 billion of supply into the market over the next year, to buying $200 billion during the next few months alone, with the potential for the program to be extended. That's a $440 billion swing in just one day! The purchase over the coming months will likely amount to roughly 50% of all supply that comes into the market.

With many employees at banks across the country working from home, and consumers also quarantined in their houses, we are likely to see a dramatic decline in new home sales and refinancing activity. This might mean that supply in the agency

MBS market could actually see a substantial decrease in the coming months, despite the recent decline in mortgage rates. Such a decline in supply in the coming months could mean the Fed's purchases might amount to an even larger share of the market, which would be even more supportive of agency MBS spreads.

Bottom line: The key takeaway from all this is that the largest single holder of agency MBS has re-emerged, thus helping to ensure a liquid and orderly mortgage market.

WM/Reuters Closing Spot Rates and WM/Reuters Forward Rates are provided by the WM Company plc in conjunction with Reuters. The WM Company plc shall not be liable for any errors in or delays in providing or making available the data contained within this service or for any actions taken in reliance on the same except to the extent that the same is directly caused by its or its employees' negligence.

An imbalance in supply and demand in the income market may result in valuation uncertainties and greater volatility, less liquidity, widening credit spreads and a lack of price transparency in the market. Investments in income securities may be affected by changes in the creditworthiness of the issuer and are subject to the risk of non-payment of principal and interest. The value of income securities also may decline because of real or perceived concerns about the issuer's ability to make principal and interest payments. As interest rates rise, the value of certain income investments is likely to decline. Investments involving higher risk do not necessarily mean higher return potential. Diversification cannot ensure a profit or eliminate the risk of loss. Debt securities are subject to risks that the issuer will not meet its payment obligations. Low rated or equivalent unrated debt securities of the type in which a strategy will invest generally offer a higher return than higher rated debt securities, but also are subject to greater risks that the issuer will default. Unrated bonds are generally regarded as being speculative.

 This image indicates content designed specifically for Financial Advisors / Investment Professionals. This material is not to be used with the public.

Before investing in any Eaton Vance fund, prospective investors should consider carefully the investment objective(s), risks, and charges and expenses. For open-end mutual funds, the current prospectus contains this and other information. To obtain a mutual fund prospectus or summary prospectus and the most recent annual and semiannual shareholder reports, contact your financial advisor or download a copy here. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. For closed-end funds, you should contact your financial advisor. To obtain the most recent annual and semi-annual shareholder report for a closed-end fund contact your financial advisor or download a copy here. Before purchasing any variable product, consider the objectives, risks, charges, and expenses associated with the underlying investment option(s) and those of the product itself. For a prospectus containing this and other information, contact your investment or insurance professional. Read the prospectus carefully before investing.

Not FDIC Insured. No Bank Guarantee. May Lose Value.

Eaton Vance does not provide tax or legal advice. Prospective investors should consult with a tax or legal advisor before making any investment decision.

The information on this Web page is for U.S. residents only and does not constitute an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to purchase, securities in any jurisdiction to any person to whom it is not lawful to make such an offer.

© Eaton Vance Management. All rights reserved. Eaton Vance open-end mutual funds are offered through Eaton Vance Distributors, Inc. Two International Place, Boston, MA 02110. Member FINRA / SIPC