

Timely insights from portfolio managers and industry experts on key financial, economic and political issues.

The views expressed in these posts are those of the authors and are current only through the date stated. These views are subject to change at any time based upon market or other conditions, and Eaton Vance disclaims any responsibility to update such views. These views may not be relied upon as investment advice and, because investment decisions for Eaton Vance are based on many factors, may not be relied upon as an indication of trading intent on behalf of any Eaton Vance strategy. The discussion herein is general in nature and is provided for informational purposes only. There is no guarantee as to its accuracy or completeness.

NOVEMBER 16, 2020

Investment Grade Fixed Income | Markets and Economy

Election and vaccine news raise growth prospects and whipsaw Treasury market

Boston - Just one week after election results that pointed to the likelihood of divided government, the news of major progress on a COVID-19 vaccine has become the dominant theme driving the markets. That sequence of events prompted a remarkable turnabout for US Treasury yields.

Prior to the election, markets had been anticipating a "blue wave" that would capture the White House and Senate — a scenario that entailed more stimulus from Washington, and corresponding upward pressure on Treasury yields. But on November 4, when divided government became the most likely outcome, yields on the 10-year US Treasury moved 14 basis points lower, as the potential for a very large fiscal stimulus was greatly reduced.

Treasury yields fell then rose as vaccine news followed the election

Source: Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, as of November 9, 2020. Yields are represented by the daily 10-Year US Treasury constant maturity rate.

Then last Monday's vaccine announcement prompted yet another pivot by the market, especially since the 90%-effective description qualified as a major surprise. Suddenly, the market could envision a more "normal" economy, and we have seen a generally broad "risk on" reaction. The 10-year US Treasury yield soared to just under 1% — a mark it hadn't reached since last June — EM currencies gained and credit spreads tightened. Equities were broadly higher, led by financials and cyclicals.

Of course, this raises questions about the direction of US Federal Reserve policy. The central bank has implied that it would need to see inflation consistently above 2% before lifting rates. This goal was never achieved during the last economic cycle, despite a decade of very easy monetary policy, an unemployment rate that reached 50-year lows and large, deficit-financed tax cuts from the Trump administration. The pre-election anticipated stimulus held out the hope that economic growth would augment or supplant more monetary easing by the Fed.

Yet in the span of just one week, as we have seen, the air went out of that balloon,

Picture of Eric

Eric Stein, CFA
Chief Investment Officer
Fixed Income
Eaton Vance
Management

"The current COVID-19 case growth is concerning, with levels comparable to last spring. However, it is likely that investors will look past the negative headlines if progress on the vaccine continues."

only to have it pumped back in again. My feeling is that if the promise of the vaccine continues to pan out in terms of efficacy, distribution and acceptance, yields could continue to rise. The Fed is OK with rates going up as long as that is primarily driven by higher inflation expectations and not an increase in real rates. They can rise a little if the cyclical outlook improves with a vaccine, etc., but if real rates go up enough to choke off a nascent recovery, the Fed would likely respond.

Bottom line: We will be watching developments on the vaccine front, as well as economic data —signs of strength continue, like this month's relatively strong payroll numbers. At the same time, the current COVID-19 case growth is concerning, with levels comparable to last spring. However, it is likely that investors will look past the negative headlines if progress on the vaccine continues.

---

An imbalance in supply and demand in the income market may result in valuation uncertainties and greater volatility, less liquidity, widening credit spreads and a lack of price transparency in the market. Investments in income securities may be affected by changes in the creditworthiness of the issuer and are subject to the risk of non-payment of principal and interest. The value of income securities also may decline because of real or perceived concerns about the issuer's ability to make principal and interest payments. As interest rates rise, the value of certain income investments is likely to decline. Investments involving higher risk do not necessarily mean higher return potential. Diversification cannot ensure a profit or eliminate the risk of loss. Debt securities are subject to risks that the issuer will not meet its payment obligations. Low rated or equivalent unrated debt securities of the type in which a strategy will invest generally offer a higher return than higher rated debt securities, but also are subject to greater risks that the issuer will default. Unrated bonds are generally regarded as being speculative. In emerging market countries, the risks may be more significant in regards to sensitivity to stock market volatility, adverse market, economic, political, regulatory, geopolitical and other conditions.

Accessibility | Privacy & Security | Terms & Conditions | Form CRS | Contact

Eaton Vance is part of Morgan Stanley Investment Management, the asset management division of Morgan Stanley

The information on this Web site is for U.S. residents only. The information on this Web site does not constitute an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to purchase, securities in any jurisdiction to any person to whom it is not lawful to make such an offer.

There are no guarantees regarding the achievement of investment objectives, target returns, portfolio construction, allocations or measurements such as alpha, tracking error, stock weightings and other information ratios. The views and strategies described may not be suitable for all investors. Not all of Eaton Vance's recommendations have been or will be profitable. Eaton Vance does not provide tax or legal advice. Investing entails risks and there can be no assurance that Eaton Vance (and its brands) will achieve profits or avoid incurring losses. Prospective investors should consult with a tax or legal advisor before making any investment decision.

NOT FDIC INSURED | OFFER NO BANK GUARANTEE | MAY LOSE VALUE | NOT INSURED BY ANY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AGENCY | NOT A DEPOSIT

© Eaton Vance Management. All rights reserved. Two International Place, Boston, MA 02110